“ I didn't even know you were gone. I always said you were like a little boy. You never grew up. I swore you were 18 when you strutted into my office and wanted to help. You told me story's that left me in tears and some that made me want to kick your butt. You'd just drop your head and. Convince me you knew and would do better. I guess God needed that infectious smile that could melt the coldest heart. Rip sweet Donnie, RIP
