She loved traveling to the mountains, reading Danielle Steel books, and coloring on her tablet. She was a beer sipping, liquor tasting, non-judgmental, love you as you are woman. Despite her willingness to always sip different beers and liquors, Mrs. Whitehead was a coffee connoisseur who preferred her coffee black and straight out of the pot. No matter the season, Mrs. Whitehead could always be found sipping on black coffee. Mrs.

Whitehead was never too full to indulge on boiled peanuts and watermelon. She loved sitting outside, bird watching, smelling roses, and people watching.

Mrs. Whitehead enjoyed spending time with her family and shared a special connection with her grandchildren and great grandchildren. She loved telling old stories including Robbie stomping in his boots, Melissa getting stung by wasps, and Liz believing in fairies. During summers and school breaks her house was filled with the love and laughter of her grandchildren and great grandchildren.
